

Subject Selections through Strengths

Why should students own their subject choices? What is the best method of selecting subjects to suit longer term visions that may not be clear as yet?

Our Subject Selection workshops support students in beginning to engage with these questions and aligning their thinking to current capabilities and the possibility of what might be.

Turning Point Consulting

Through involvement with this workshop, students will have a clearer understanding of how to select subjects based on their knowledge of themselves and their options. They will obtain an insight utilising their strengths in decision making to support best outcomes in school life, study patterns, results and potential post-school pathways.

During the workshop students will be encouraged to take ownership of their subject selections based on personal strengths and talents, work habits and potential career pathways. They will reflect on their current subjects while considering the “best” subjects for them for the year ahead.

Referring to tangible examples and seeking out thoughts from the room we will discuss:

- Why subject choices matters
- How to have a purpose through selecting the right subjects
- Balancing choices with strengths and workload
- Industries in relation to subject interests

“Kathryn Taylor offers an engaging and relevant subject selection seminar where students are able to link their interests and abilities with subjects offered to them in year 11 and 12 through an intense workshop session including discussion and activities which assist individual students have a clearer decision when it comes to subject choice. Kathryn is knowledgeable and has great expertise in this area and I would highly recommend her program to any school during their subject selection process.”
